About the Seminar

The Constitution of India secures social, economic and political justice for all its citizens and confers the right to life, liberty, equality, and dignity to all. To achieve these objectives of the Constitution the Apex Court of India is interpreting the Constitution almost every day to secure justice for a large section of repressed and underprivileged persons and the Government is also making efforts to achieve these goals set by the Constitution. In the recent past, the Courts and the Government have faced many challenges in implementation and Interpretation, even after about 70 years of the commencement of the Indian Constitution the goals set by the Constitution are yet to be achieved. The symposium will focus on the recent trends in this area and would focus on engaging the participants with constitutional theory and its practical application in framing law and policy in order to realize the constitutional vision in recent years.
